An independent Newspaper.

IN Times like the present, when Political Affairs are of the most serious Importance; when War is upon our Borders, and every Wind brings an Account of some new Slaughter of the Human Species; when our Trade is greatly depressed, and our Taxes greatly increased; when every enlightened Englishman and true Patriot feels for the Fate of his once-flourishing Country—what is more to be prized, than a Newspaper which gives to its Readers Things as they are, without those ministerial Coverings which are too frequently put upon public Events, in Order to hoodwink the great Body of the People, who are most materially concerned in the Result?

Such a Paper, to the best of his Judgment and Ability, the Publisher is proud to say, is the

SHEFFIELD REGISTER:

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY:

A Paper, the independent Spirit of which has gained it, perhaps, a greater Degree of Countenance than most other Papers in the Country.

Some officious Person or Persons having taken Measures to intimidate the Bookfellers of Wakefield and Barnsley, so as to induce them to decline selling the REGISTER any longer,

A SPECIAL MESSENGER,

Will in future be dispatched to those Places; J. GALES being determined that no interested Man, or Body of Men, shall prevent the Circulation of his Paper in any Place, where the Inhabitants are desirous of receiving it.

The Messenger who delivers the Register will also receive Orders for new Publications and other Articles in the Bookselling and Stationary Branches.

He means also to carry small Parcels on his own Account.

Persons not residing in the Newsmen's Road, are desired to give Orders for the Papers to be left at some place in his Way.
